Colin Andrews even made it to little old Adelaide! However, I have not heard from anyone in Oz that Doug and Dave made it here.

Mark,

I phoned Dynamo publishers a couple of days ago but there was no answer. I then rang the manager at his home and his wife told me they are still on vacation till January 20. However, she said you can order the book by fax. Just leave your name, address and Visa card number and they'll despatch the book as soon as they get back to work.

Vlad

Hi Pete,
        Great news!! I reposted on CIS this morning and then called your BBS too, just in case (the line on this BBS was busy so I didn't see your message here first.)  Sorry for the repetition!  But many, many thanks for the reply.  Please ignore the duplicate messages that now will clutter your mail <g>!

Re the time, I'm usually at it early myself, starting work around 3:30 or so in the dark-time.  Actually it's a great time to work or to BBS because for the former there are fewer interruptions and no phone calls from cemetary plot salesmen (no offense any of you out there who read this and follow that "calling"), and for the latter, there seems to be less of a problem with line noise.  --Gee, they let you play computers at work too? What a deal! ;-)

The Sphinx thing is really interesting...haven't seen anything new myself, but am hoping. Did you see the UFONS clips on that?  Pretty good detail.
I agree about the dates -- manmade concepts are not material in cosmic arenas.  Remember the Russell, Kansas, pair, Butts and Corder, who got their UFO info and catastrophe predictions from "Peter/Cephas" the angel?  He kept getting the dates wrong and when they were pressed to ask him why he couldn't get it right when he's supposed to be able to see it all as if reading a book forward and backward, he said our earth times were not relevant to real time and it was easy to make errors in the translation (gist of it - not literally what was reported.)  So if Peter the Great can goof, why not the others for the same reason?

        Thanks so much for the reply.  I'll be eager to see the packet and happy to reimburse postage too.

Hi John,
        Yep, I'm a big fan of Jones' books.  I'd read the first couple before the article in Writer's Digest that told how he wrote while at sea and showed a photo of him in the cabin, perched over a typewriter -- has forever humbled me (any time I grump about not having time or comforts for writing, I think of him trying to write in at-sea conditions _and getting it done!_ and I shut up again!)
        I've read most of his books and now that you mention _Adrift_ I'll recheck..probably was that one.  I didn't finish a couple of the more technical books, but thoroughly enjoyed all the rest.  What a wonderful time you must've had quaffing brews with a storyteller like that!  I've often thought how great that would be. And, actually I owe Tristan Jones a debt.  His books were the spur that made a very great change in our lives (my husband and me, that is) and we've said many times if he's ever around and available, we'll buy him a drink anytime.  (Getting to talk to him too would be gravy!)  Probably people like him don't realize what they do for their readers, but I've read other people who said they got their inspiration or courage or will or whatever from reading TJ's books, that his quiet determination and willpower was so inspiring they gained new perspective on their own little problems and were able to overcome them.  From the way he writes, I would guess he wouldn't like such "frou-frou" talk, but nevertheless, he's done a lot of good for a lot of people by just telling his stories in unvarnished, straightforward and honest fashion.

Ah, a fellow Jones fan, 'tis great indeed!

(If I can find the reference, I'll let you know...try to post the page, etc. and quote.)

BTW, I didn't realize you were a serious sailor.  One assumes anyone near H2O is some kind of waterbug, but being one who can share the company of a T.Jones is quite something else again. Wow!

Hi Pete... Deuterium is "heavy hydrogen", Deuterium Oxide (D20) is the "heavy water" you refer to. Elemental hydrogen consists of a single proton nucleus orbited by one electron, whereas isotopic deuterium contains the addition of one neutron to the hydrogen nucleus. The deuteron is the nucleus of the deuterium atom, sans the electron. We'll be hearing a great deal about the "D" word in the coming months re: CC research. Time will tell if there is a valid correlation.

Take care,

Hi Don,

Help! My first instinct, when reading what you just posted, it to run in panic! I don't want to have anything to do with such people with such notions. It makes me dizzy, and IMHO, anyone who finds comfort in such droolings, is lost!

Thanks for posting! All this means to me is that for hundreds of years, people (some people) have been looking for a Hero to rescue them. Didn't the Germans see Hitler as such a Hero? Does George Bush see himself as such a Hero when he talked of The New World Order?

Some of the hard-liner Contactees see Aliens as "Space Brothers"--Heroes who will save them. The sad thing is that these Heroes take away too many of our freedoms and turn us into mindless creatures.

Coming down off my soap box,

?  Hmmm, indeed.  Actually, some of the most interesting stuff is underwater on
?  the U.S. Costal Shelf, around Bermuda and the Caribbean islands, and in the ?  Gulf of Mexico.  I seem to recall the discovery of a well-preserved stone
?  staircase leading down to a beach on the Yucatan.
? But the beach is now 150' underwater, the stairs begin almost 100' underwater,
?  and they clearly correspond to sea levels of B.C. 20,000.
? There's a similar anomaly just below Mancu Picu in the Andes: a stairway leads
?  down to the beach. The beach is at about 11,000 feet elevation, and seems to ? have been there before the Mountains rose to their present height! In fact the ?  whole city of Mancu Picu has been 'undatable' according to some sources,
?  because it was virtually earthquake-proof (until the Conquistadores removed
?  the flexible silver braces from the buildings).
?  Best,

What are your sources, Clark?

Been hearing a couple of rumors:

1. In late Nov early Dec, over Puerto Rico, 2 F-14's played tag with a UFO in front of lots of people AND a TV camera from the local station. I've heard several people talk about it, but no one who has seen/has access to the video. According to Hard Copy production staff, they were outbid for the video by another 'news' organization.

2. The Feds are going to come clean. Been able to trace this to a Dr. Robert Carr at the Univ of Southern Florida who is tied to the Feds somehow.

Interested in why I'm as nuts as them or maybe ?????

Thanks so much, that was exactly the distant bell that rang in my head when I heard the rumor. FEMA, FEMA, FEMA. Bingo!

In addition to government types, do we have any pilots here? For some reason "private" pilots were specifically mentioned, nothing said about Commercial Pilots, not sure what that implied.

Hi, long time no message (?). About the new planets... Has there been any indication on what the scientists think about the planets actually being there? For instance, theoretically, the planets should have been destroyed in the later stages of the star's development. Why would have these planets still be "hanging" around?

While driving to St Louis early Sat morning, I watched a green meteor in the southern sky. It was just a regular one and all, except that it was green. This reminded me of the tales my father had of two particular ones he had seen.

In addition to regular green meteors he had seen, two others were something special, and he always communicated a sense of awe when relating the stories. One in particular (in the 50's) was so slow moving and so long lasting that he was sure it was not a meteor. It was also seen across the continent by many people. I think it was this that led him to want to attend the KC UFO club meetings in the early sixties.

I don't recall the theories he had or had heard about these or the details that made people think they were not meteors.

Can someone tell me more about the reasons people did (and still do?) place emphasis on these slow-moving celestial events?

This fellow Carr has been making this claim for literally decades. He seems to be a wacko, tied into the Deep Blue rumor mill (underground bases, face-eating aliens, etc.) I wouldn't pay much attention.
